They had no audience of the French Emperor, and the manner in which the the Chinese have resisted all attempts at an audience of foreigners with their own andon of Heaven's may give this interview an altogether undue importance, Their visit to Lord Clarendon was quite enough in the way of that kind of recognition. and no more was expected when they came. There is no objection to their being made one of the adjuncts to the present brilliant bondon seasate, but the thing has now gone a little to far. Hathing then sent only " to see and report," they have no proper efficial standing, and as I have pointed out, their position in their own country is by no means a high one. If a reception of this Sind be conterred upon them, what can we do more when a high mandarin of the Chinese empire -- a tievernor, or G -vermer-tieneral, or a Preodept of me at the Six Boards-is sent here?
